Avocado Festival History

The Avocado Festival is one of the most popular events in all of San Diego County. There is something for all ages, which is demonstrated in the annual attendance of over 100,000 visitors.

This Festival celebrates Fallbrook's heritage as an agricultural community. We see our identity on display in many exhibits, and the avocado and citrus groves are visible to all festival goers as they drive through our rural countryside on their way to Fallbrook. The central role the avocado plays in our lives is evident in the Guacamole Contest, the Holy Guaca-Moly booths scattered on Main Avenue, the Art of the Avocado Exhibit on display, the Avo 500 children's car race, and the Best Decorated Avocado Contest. A wide variety of avocado products are also found all along the Festival streets with product and food vendors alike. It is a fun-filled way to celebrate our heritage and be entertained at the same time.

You will find almost any item imaginable to buy at the Festival, along with home improvement and business vendors, local farm displays and informational displays featuring local law enforcement. You will also find music, as well as a beer and margarita garden for those looking to relax for a bit. Fine art and demonstrations are to be found at the Artisan Walk on Alvarado. Beautiful hand-made arts and crafts are spread throughout the venue. The Fallbrook Avocado Festival is an event not to be missed!

Sponsorship of this event will reach educated, active individuals who are inclined to patronize those businesses that cater to their interests and lifestyles. The publicity leading up to the Avocado Festival and the event itself may be the perfect match for your products or services.

- Estimated economic impact on Fallbrook for this one day event is over 2 million dollars
- Numerous nonprofit organizations participate and benefit from this local Avocado Festival
- Numerous agricultural businesses are participants in the Festival

We invite you to take advantage of this exceptional media opportunity

Fallbrook's Annual Avocado Festival has a wide following that reaches as far north as Santa Barbara and beyond. Some folks plan an annual vacation to the area to include attending the Avocado Festival. Well over 100,000 people come to this charming village the day of the festival from all over the US.

Over 250 volunteers are actively involved and help make the day a success, and 30 to 35 major sponsors take advantage of the success and advertising opportunities this exciting event offers. Locally, advertisement aims at reinforcing the date and revealing the exciting new elements for the year. Promotion beyond local borders draws people who may be new to the event and will visit for the first time.

All advertising is intended to highlight our sponsors. With the ease of using the Fallbrook Chamber website and the variety of media types put into play, our sponsors receive wide exposure as well as linking their names with a highly successful yearly event.

- Print advertising includes newspapers such as the San Diego Union Tribune and Village News, magazines like RV Journal, Inland Empire Magazine, Westways (AAA) Magazine, and the Inland Entertainment Review. Facebook and other social media is also utilized to publicize our event sponsors.
- Event posters are spread out in local businesses, numerous online news and magazine venues, plus entertainment and Chamber e-newsletters.
- Radio coverage is put into place in advance, plus broadcast live the day of the event by Univision radio station, Many tour companies, bring groups from various locations for a day at the festival.
- The Chamber puts out multiple press releases in local newspapers leading up to the festival mentioning sponsors wherever possible.
- Festival vendors have their own followers and advertise their participation in the Avocado Festival via social and print media.
- Large event banners are posted in high traffic areas, in clear view of residents and visitors alike.

Deadline for sponsorship entries is March 20, 2020
